Why we looked at employment

- Shift toward a community impact orientation in 2003
- Losing Ground research in 2007
- Intelligence from member agencies — our city’s social barometer
- Wanted to examine the impact of changing employment on life outside of work
“We’re just giving you jobs or work as it comes. . . . You don’t have benefits. . . . If you get assigned work, great; if you don’t, you don’t get any. . . . That was stressful because you could get a month without work and then suddenly work a long weekend, twelve hour shifts. . . . You get all this money, but you have to make it last because who knows when they’re going to call you again.”

* In the "Other" category, 70% are in full-time employment but either receive no benefits beyond a wage or are unable to confirm they would be with their current employer for at least 12 months. 15% are self-employed with employees and 14% are in full-time employment but their hours varied from week to week and in some cases could be less than 30 hours.

Many people in precarious jobs have a hard time moving into better opportunities.

“I’ve never been at a job where they were offering that kind of training. They actually wanted you to know the stuff already. . . . They’re not going to say “Oh, we’re going to be willing to train.” All they see is a bunch of applicants in front of them and they’re not going to take somebody on that doesn’t have the training or the experience.”

It makes me feel like “okay, I’m not doing well here, so maybe I had to go back to where I come from, because I’m just getting by in this country.”
