Shaping Futures Partner Meetings

University of Toronto, May 22-24, 2017
Shaping Futures: The Opportunity

• Canada is shaping its strategies now and media and governments are focused on solutions

• Time to examine why the system is in crisis and the fundamentals that need changing including sacred cows

• Housing policies can increase social mobility, decrease inequality

• Skyrocketing price growth is in the media and diminishing housing aspirations of many

• Stock of social housing not growing in 3 countries

• Rental housing becoming longer term solution for many and it too needs an increased focus around condition & security of tenure
Shaping Futures: Project Themes

• Private Rental System
• Economic Case for Housing Investment
• Pressured Markets
• Business Diversity & NP Sector Sustainability
• Institutions and Governance
• Finance
• Communicating a New Narrative
Needed: A New Housing Narrative

• Address the whole housing system not just the housing market

• Replace old policies that are no longer working or at least not working for many

• Identify ways for governments to manage price growth

• Maintain the diversity in our cities

• Consider tax regime changes to create more equality of housing opportunities

• Support inclusionary zoning

• Build local housing strategy making
Needed

• A new productivity argument for housing as economic infrastructure
• More engagement & modeling by finance ministries on how housing drives the economy
• An improved collaboration among governments
• More rental housing, both private & non-profit
• A shifting away from policies that shut people out of communities and far from opportunities of employment
• Consideration of transit and housing policies concurrently
Needed: Data and Research

• A data and research centre to inform Canadian housing policy and provide opportunities for dialogue and knowledge exchange

• Australia has the Australian Housing and Urban Research Institute (AHURI)

• The UK has just formed a UK Collaborative Centre for Housing Evidence (CaCHE) headed up by Ken Gibb at the University of Glasgow
